The Hon. Mike Pompeo
U.S. Secretary of State
2201 C Street, NW
Washington, DC 20520

Dear Secretary Pompeo:

We, the undersigned 100 elected leaders and LGBTQ, human rights and faith-based organizations and institutions, write to urge you to condemn — in the strongest terms possible — published reports that the Sultan of Brunei Hassanal Bolkiah has begun implementation of the nation’s penal code, which includes death by stoning and whipping of LGBTQ people. Additionally, we urge you to make bringing an end to these barbaric practices a key foreign policy priority of the United States and to use all diplomatic tools and avenues — including the imposition of Global Magnitsky sanctions for any official who implements these laws — to achieve such an end.

It is a grotesque understatement to assert that a state-sanctioned death penalty for LGBTQ people and those who commit “adultery,” amputation for robbery, flogging of women who have abortions and criminalization of exposing Muslim children to the beliefs and practices of any religion other than Islam are violations of basic human rights, religious freedom, the UN Declaration of Human Rights, and international norms. Indeed, it is our belief — and the longstanding view of the United States — that when a government targets minority groups for persecution, abuse, and murder, that government is committing crimes against humanity.

Brunei’s official announcement that it will reinstate the practice of public stoning of people accused of LGBTQ relations and adultery must be rejected and sanctioned by the United States. Such state-sanctioned practices have no place in today’s world, and rightly have drawn strong expressions of disapproval around the world, including from many Islamic leaders who reject the Sultan’s interpretation of shariah law.

Far from being prompted to reconsider its horrifying policy, however, the Sultanate doubled down in defense of its parallel legal system and Syariah Penal Code Order (SPCO) 2013 from 3rd April 2019, in order to “criminaliz(e) and deter acts that are against the teachings of Islam.”

During much of the 70 years since World War II, America sought to provide global moral leadership, including the advancement and promotion of respect for democracy and human rights. In recent decades, the United States has strongly condemned countries around the world that criminalize and discriminate against LGBTQ people or those perceived to be gender-nonconforming.

At the 2016 Republican National Convention, President Trump committed to doing “everything in [his] power” to protect LGBTQ people. In October 2017, State Department spokesperson Heather Nauert said that the United States “unequivocally condemns the application of the death penalty for conduct such as homosexuality, blasphemy, adultery, and apostasy.” During your own confirmation hearing to serve as U.S. Secretary of State, you said that you “deeply believe that LGBTQ persons have every right that every other person in the world would have.”

We urge you to condemn Sultan Hassanah Bolkiah’s appalling decision to begin implementing SPCO 2013 immediately and to use all diplomatic tools and avenues — including the imposition of sanctions, barring the Sultan and other senior Brunei government officials from entering the United States, and the seizure of assets — if the law is not withdrawn.

Sincerely,
